

Clarendon Lawyers partners with STARTUP61 HealthTech Accelerator @ Royal Melbourne Hospital

Monday, 14 November 2016

Clarendon Lawyers has partnered with STARTUP61 in connection with the HealthTech Accelerator Program (Program), an incubator accelerator program designed to assist entrepreneurs in the health technology space who want to develop a startup.

The 8 week Program officially commenced on 17 October 2016 and is being run out of The Royal Melbourne Hospital in collaboration with Melbourne Health. STARTUP61 has accepted 13 startups to participate, each seeking to address a broad range of issues in the delivery of health services.

Startups who are accepted into the Program are provided with a working space, mentoring and networking opportunities with clinicians at Melbourne Health and with other Program participants.

As an official sponsor and legal partner, Clarendon Lawyers is delighted to support the Program as part of its ongoing commitment to startups, entrepreneurship and venture capital. Clarendon Lawyers has assisted STARTUP61 in establishing a legal framework for the Program. It will also provide guidance and mentor services to participants in connection with building their startups.

Director, Alex Bean said of the Program “it is fantastic to see the commitment STARTUP61 and Melbourne Health are showing to building startups, connecting industry professionals and ultimately improving the delivery of healthcare services in Australia. We feel privileged at Clarendon Lawyers to have been chosen to partner with STARTUP61 to help build and deliver the program”.
